Beware: Gamers

When I got started with this whole inQuest gig some 10 months ago, I knew very little about collectible card games. And as time rolled on, I realized that I know once less about the analysis and as time rolled on, I realized that I know even less about the people who play them.

While I've learned a thing or two about the games—y'know, things like being able to decipher the difference between Wyvern and Middle.

earth and how to use a giant. Magic Chaos Orb card to my advantage—I still can't figure out those gamers.

There oughts be some sort of an investigation here. Some of these people cannot possibly be from this planet. They should be locked up for good. Some of them seem downright dangerous, and the last thing I need is my life peopuratized by a fresk attacking me because of a dispute over an loy Maniputator card.

So I've put together the following list of the Top 10 most battling CCGrelated things I've witnessed during my time here at InQuest:

A pumple-faced, pudgy trenager running around a retail store's parking lot, wearing nothing but Herely cards to cover his privates, yelling "I am the kinn of Social" at the ton of bid leave.

"I am the king of Spaint" at the top of his lungs

9. A best-up old van, looking much like the Mystery Machine from "Scooby-Doo," barreling past me on the highway with a sign on the back that read." Wywerr or Bust."

 8. A skinny old man from Lima, Peru, vehemently insisting that he was Crenshaw the Mortificator from the Doomtrooper card set.

7. A psychotic mother, who looked like the Chaos Orb from the neck up, standing in a remote corner of a Shop-Rite, mercilessly taunting her infant child with a Shivan Dragon card.

6. Hybonan Gates.

Price Guide Director Stephen Shamus lying in a bowl of his own urine
 A. A hefty 12-year-old trying desperately to exchange his Marvel Over-

Power cards for a chocolate dip cone at the local Dairy Queen.

3. A father who named his first-born "fyhad" (hey, it could've been a lot worse—he could've been a $lood Wors fan).

2. Baron Sendir himself throwing a portly midget clear across the room.

at a local pool hall,

1. A sizable middle-aged man at the local 7-11 eating a Guordians card.

"I thought it was a beef jerky," he said.

Are there rational explanations for these actions? Do you gamers out there consider this type of behavior "normal"? I am bogging you to please contact me and fill me in on this life of yours. I demand an explanation. But a stuffed as I am by these and other actions (I had to been this life.

But as buffied as I am by these and other actions (I had to keep this list to a PC-13 rating, y flowny), you gamers seem like awdi guys, and guls. Kinda makes me feel bad about rounding up some buddles to pants the college D&D club before chasing the members around campus while smasting them with lacross sticks:

GUESS WHO'S READING YOUR MAIL

Okay, listen up. This is Rick Swan talking, the new overseer of "InQuisition." Yep, I've been pushed-er, promoted-from the back of the mag to the front (but I'll still be vakkin' at you on the last page, same as always). From here on out, I'm the guy who'll be sifting through your scrawls, picking out the cream of the crop to share with the drooting multitudes. But, of course, I can't print 'em if you don't write 'em! Matter of fact, right now I'm perched on the roof, binoculars in hand, looking for the mail truck, So whadda ya think? Will CCCs be the death of roleplaying? Is Magic: The Gathering getting too.

I am quite sick of the people who claim that Mosic and other card games like it have killed roleplaying. The only way roleplaying will die is if you, the roleolayer, let it die II all of you decide to stop playing your Dungeans & Dragons and games like that, roleplaying will die. And not because of us, but because of you. We are not your scape goats for the diminishing interest in roleplaying and the increasing interest in card games. Keep your afternoon-long, very boring, backpack-filling roleplaying games, I believe fill stick to my pocket-sized deck of Mastic cards. And please don't knock me for it. After all. how can you criticize someone for playing a game that is fun for him?

You might be interested to know that the issue with the oversized Chaos Orb in it (InQuest #12) disappeared from the shelves of my local comic book store before I even saw it. The story I heard was that two men came in and bought all the copies earlier that day. I'd been writing for it since I saw the announcement several months ago, Steve Jahner at Capital City Comics and Books in Lansing was rice enough to call his distributor, find out that they were out of it (so he couldn't reorder), and call around to three stores in the area. He managed to locate one copy. If I remember right, the tournament rules only require that cards have "identical cardback design." The rules don't say anything about a size difference. Does this mean the End of the World Imminent Yes, that's right, there's a crisis in the making for the CCG industry. What is it, you ask? Well, game designers are going to run out of synonyms for "tap," So far there are six different ways to tap a card, namely; tap (Masic The Gatherina, Whash, crank (On the Edge), drain (Ultimote Combot), open (Heresar Kingdom Come), turn (Shadowfist) and JULY 19 10 7

I supgest that inQuest run a contest asking for the best smonym for "tap," and the winner would get a copy of every card that has an existing rip-off synonym printed somewhere in its text box.

Choos Clarified

Every day at lunch we play. There's usually a game or two of Mosic going on, with Stor Trek at the far end, a good portion of the table taking up a Middle-earth: The Wissen's duel, and some trading on the floor. Kids walk by and laugh at us, and we throw apples. (You'd be surprised how good our arm has become over the past year.)

So when we mad the "I Itimate Chans" article (InDust #12), we were set like. "We really have to do this," So we did. And it sucked. Really, really sucked. For something that seemed so simple, it was really hand. This led us to the conclusion that we were doing something wrong

Doofus Alert Whoever wrote the article on the 10 most-desirable Middle-earth. The Wizords cards ("Lore of the Rings," InQuest #12) is a complete doofus! I've played Mook for more than a year now and was glad when the store I work at began carrying InOvest. Besides being an entertaining read (I put it ahead of Time), it gave me a chance to see how a deck could be built beyond my typical Weenie World. But most of your articles seemed to assume that every player had four copies of every rare card in existence. Maybe you should list how much it would cost to build one of your killer decks. I'd rather make my monthly mortgage payment, thank you. My hopes went up when I saw leff

Hannes' "Killer Instruct: How to Build a Killer Deck in Nine Easy Steps* (In/Durst #11). When he asked, "What's the best way to make a killer deck if you don't already own four of every Mosic card?" I thought, "Finally! An article that hits me right where I live-namely. my wallet." But not Hannes describes his easy deck as containing four lokulhaupses, four Ethnam Dinns, four Black Vises and a fistful of other rare/uncommon cards. Hero Partners with R. Talsorian

Hero Games, the champion of superhero gaming, has a new set of teammates. R. Talsorian Games will be handling production and distribution of Hero's paper-based products. Under the agreement, Hero will supply fully edited manuscripts that R. Talsonan will produce and distribute. In February, Hero ended its 10-year team-up with Iron Crown Enterprises, with whom they had a similar relationship ("Hero Splits from ICE," "InQuest News," InQuest #14). The first planned Hero-R. Tabonan release will be a new exi-

The lawsuit against Games Workshop by three Southwestern games distributors is moving into the discovery phase and will on from there to trial.

Games Workshop, which makes Warhammer and other games, began acting as its own distributor to retail outlets in September 1995 ("Distributors Sue Games Workshop." "News & Notes." InQuest #8). The three plaintiffs.....Warragness West. The Armory and Greenfield Hobby Distributors-have charged Games Workshop with breach of contract, fraud and violation of anti-trust regulations, claiming that the company's self-distribution could unfairly drive up the price of its products.

After settlement talks broke down, Judge E.L. Meechem of the U.S. District Court denied the distributors' motion for a preliminary injunction that would have forced Games Workshop to continue to sell them products

Games Workshop spokesman Mark Hall had no comment on the developments except to say that his company would continue to do business as it had since September. The case now opes into the discovery phase, as each party attempts to gain information from the other in preparation for trial, which is not likely to begin before the summer. # Patrick Daniel O'Neill his deck, played by Max Suver, tied for third place in the Juniors division of the first Magic Pro Tour tournament. The tournament used standard Type II deck construction rules with one extra twist: each deck had to include at least five cards apiece from Foller Empires, Chronicles, Ice Age and Homelands

Your goal when playing this deck is simple; destroy anything. your opponent puts into play, nibble away with two points of damage here and there when the opportunity strikes, and finish him off with a sneak attack from Emp the Relentless or a massive Stormbind blitz.

One of the main concepts behind this deck is that it doesn't need very many ways to damage its oppopent, because the ones it has are hard to stop (Eron the Relentless, Blinking Spirit, Mishra's Factories and Stormbind). Wat a sec-what about all those red, direct-damage spells? Don't they count? Well, yes, the Lightning Bolts, Incinerates and Fireballs can be used to damage your poponent, but don't think of them that way. These spells are primarily for creature control, With 10 directdamage spells and four Swords to Plowshares, you should be able to destroy just about anything your opponent can field in the way of creatures. But don't waste the direct damage on shooting your opponent unless you can finish him off (Of course, if he's playing a creatureless deck, blast him with every-

You may be wondering how useful Stormbind can be with only five green mana sources in the deck. Forest, all you need is one use of Land Tax and you're set. Use the Stormbind the same way as the Lightning Bolts and Incinerates, Once it's in play, every card in your band is almost a mini-Bolt.

Attack with the Mishra's Factories as soon as you've gotten rid of any initial wave of creatures your opponent may have had. Some decks use Factories mainly as colorless mana sources, and only turn them into creatures when they really need a blocker or when an opponent's tapped out. This deck isn't so cautious with them. With close to half the deck below lands fand with three Land Taxes, you've got a good chance of getting one near the beginning of the game), you shouldn't have too many mana problems.

Blinking Spirits are loads of fun, and nearly impossible to Use it for a blocker if you have to flike when you're waiting to pull a Swords to Plowshares to get rid of your opponent's Repentant Blacksmith). Once you've gotten rid of your goognent's creatures, keep hitting him with Blinky for two points a shot. Be careful of your timing with Eron > opponent with his pants down—that is, tapped out and with no creatures to block-Eron does more damage, than a Fireball for the same rost. If you can keep him alive long enough to attack more than once, even better, but don't count on it: he's a magnet for every creature-killing spell in your opponent's deck. But if your populate isn't considerate enough to tap out for you, try testing the waters by activating a Mishra's Factory: this should hopefully draw out your opponent's Lightning Bolts. If lokulhaups is your "reset button," Cast it when things start to tilt in favor of your opponent, when he overextends himself in any way or when he puts out annoving artifacts like Disrupting Scepters or layern-dae Tomes. Try to keep some land in your hand (Land Tax works wonders for this) so you can quickly get started again after lokulhaups Jokulhaups also forms a "god combo" with two other cards in this deck: Land Tax and Stormbind, Get. those two enchantments in play and then cast lokulhaups. By the time he gets enough land back out to become dangerous, you'll have filled your hand with land and be flinging them at him (or any weense creatures he puts out) with Stormbind.

Balance is another "reset button." and combines well with Stormband since you can respond to your own Balance by throwing as many cards as you have mana for. Then, of course, there's the Zuran Orb combosacrifice all your lands to the Orb after casting Balance. and really ruin your opponent's day. (If playing against a blue deck, don't make the mistake of sacrificing the land first-wait until it's too late for your opponent to counter the Balancel) Also, when you've got the Orb out, remember to sacrifice any land that's about to be destroyed by anything else.

The Dwarven Ruins and Ruins of Trokair are in here mostly to fill the five-card Follen Empires requirement, but they turn out to work well for some combos, lokulhaups takes six mana to cast; if you're just using normal lands, you may have a tough time getting enough. mana to cast it before your opponent does some serious mauling. A sacrifice-land or two makes a big difference here. Also, if you get into one of those Land Tax standoffs where neither player wants to put out another land because it will let the other player tax, you can sacrifice a Ruins to break the tie Sideboard strategies: pull in the Disenchants if your opponent is using any artifacts or enchantments at all. Against artifact-heavy decks, bring in Divine Offering as well. Pyroblast is for blue decks, of course, and Serrated Arrows are for weenle decks, if your opponent uses Circle of Protection. Red, take Eron the Relentless out; the chance of him getting to deal any damage becomes low enough that it's not worth the space.

ur's Weirding is a card less valued than many of the rares in Ice Age, and the reason is simple, it looks like a card that hurts you as much as it does your opponent. It's a subtle card. yet powerful. When you play it, both players lay their hands face up on the table, and when it's time to draw, any opponent may pay two life to force the person drawing to discard the card. It works both ways, so your opponent'll be able to prevent you from drawing cards took. So why bother?

The answer is simple: It's the ultimate "lock" card. You get a "lock" when your opponent can do nothing to win. Zur's Weirding lets you get that lock > hand if you don't want him to, He's dead. Hn\to. No chance. Most players, once they realize this. will go ahead and concede, unless they're unbellevably stubborn. This approach works similarly with landfall and critterless decks. How many of you playing landfell decks would love to keep your opponent from drawing and using land? Well. get your opponent low on land, slap down the Weirding and watch him squirm as he takes damage from your Vise. The advantage of preventing him from drawing land outweighs the minor loss of a card to his hand in that sort of deck What about insuring that there are fewer creatures for you to kill? Play the Weirding any time and then, suddenly, you have the unparalleled luxury of being able to choose when your opponent gets a creature into his hand, it's ideal in creatureless decks. Wait till you get that Wrath of God and then go ahead and let him have one or two creatures. You'll get a lot more entertainment that way

There are some cards that make the Weirding even more powerful. Any of the life-giving cards'll give you more points to spend on blocking cards, so those can be handy, Ivory Tower, Healing Salve, Stream of Life, Alabaster Potion, Drain Life and Fountain of Youth are all great for guaranteeing that you can afford to bump his cards, though I'd recommend the Fountains over the spells, since they're nermanents and thus reursable.

Truth to tell with enough fle-giving cards, you can afford to put the Werding into almost any type of deck. A ween'e deck can benefit from the fact that your opponent can't get out any bullies large enquals to snack on your pets. Cook a burn deck by denying him Fireballs. Keep a Goblin deck from ever getting those Kings and Grenades out. The uses are endless, as long as you have the life to support it. And when you figure the amount of damage you can avoid, it's almost always worth it. Pay two life to prevent your opponent from being able to throw a five-point Fireball your way? Sure it's worth it! Want to pull a vicious trick? Combine this card with Necropotence, which means you don't use a normal draw phase (and thus, he can't strip you of any cards). Necropotence actually stops you from having a draw phase, and it states that the cards are placed into your hand just before your discard phase. Thus, you never draw and your concent can't force you to discard! Elkin Bottle works similarly. Another pasty trick is to use Roomerang or Time Elemental to bounce the Weirding back to your hand before your turn-you get around the effect, but your opponent doesn't when you replay it at the end of your turn. Rather like with Stasis, this play can frequently cause frothing at the mouth in unsuspecting enemies. So you see, once you understand what's really going on with the card, there are very few decks that you can't manage to fit Zur's Weirding into. After all, who wouldn't want to lock in the win early?

Ranking the Colors

1. Red

Be consistent, most destruction, cards that dodemage for zero manus. and 5 just about got it all in the expression fleet still card feel with exchangements, but MAN can thandle enthics and lands. Forget Gobbins, Mobiled and Downess, the ages are the top boy in red now. The best thing about the red cards in Allaxons is that there are very fee with as ear cultiply writtleless in fact, there are express a few cards that well make an impact on the tournament score.

2. Blue

Between Deminsthing Between Deminsthing and Force of Will, blue has the most powerful cards of the fifte colors (though fewer of them). Complemented by a nice most of countering afterly, filterly mesquisition and creature control, blue's got a rice set of cards. Allences dich't really do anything to make all-blue decies viable, but it certainly made blue a color to be reckoned with Ranger may not be very exciting, but they pack a lot of punch. And although Royan's a logend, gene finally got a card to give all of its creatures a boost. However, given got whated on just about everything else. Tornado is practically unusable, and the visition new quidantiments just aren't exciting enough to put green any higher than third on the lat.

4. Black Black's entirementally funlsy new abilities with cach lis Read of the Machine and Stronguid Spy, Lim-Dill's High Guard is another spull veem (20/1 Hest strike for three mana) and Dystopia is a homfacelly proverial hoseard Dystopia is a homfacel proverial hoseded Stiff, overall, Alliance just desert add that much to this color. There are a few really good cards, but there are just too many that aren't ternitle vestion.

S. VVIDEO:
White's got a lot of interesting cards, but nothing that'll really turn any heads. Scarc of the Veteran is funly because of its zerocost, but every color's got that. As always, white's got some interesting, over-pinced ceasures, but nothing that's going to shale up the gilly enronment. Of course, white players shouldn't complain. With white dominating the tournament scene, it's about time Witards of the Coast held back a Vete.

The Other Stuff:

There are sum worthwell a stelled creature, and a lot of hwated new abilities that use, and a lot of hwated new abilities that creature, and a lot of any deck: For the most part, the gold cards are usable, with none costing more than four raman to cast, and no more than one of each color mins. As for land, each color got a specific land Some are great, some are to keep, but none of them suck. It's always nice to see new lands, so no complaints there.

est precious commodity in the world is something that connot be registered in any bank

These two rivals meet in The Nec, the global computer network where the lines between digital drawn and reality are blurred in Netruner, each player assumes the role of one side

Netrunner is played using modular turns. Instead of having a draw phase, an attack phase and so on, each side is permitted a certain number of actions in its turn. An action can consist of drawing a card, drawing a "bit"-a token representing money, power and influence-from the "bit bucket," placing a card into play or any of a dozen other things. These actions can be dupliconed or improd as you choose; you desen your own turn. The Netrumer starts with four actions per turn. The Corporation gets a mandatory card draw and three actions. Extra actions

As the Corporation, your same revolves around the establishment and protection of data forts. where all plans and assets are kept. Three of these are permanent Central Data Forts. Research & Development (your deck), Headquarters (your hand) and the Archives (your discard pile).

The other data forts are subsidiaries. Think of them as World Wide Web pages on speed. In subsidery data forts, you'll find either an agenda or a node. Agendas are the real prizes they are the scores plans, the corporate takeovers, the private wars and the boardroom dealings that are the life and death of any company. Nodes represent the other projects the company is involved in, things like advertising, recruitment and development. Nodes are not as important as agendisfor victory, but they're easer to use and can provide lots of assets for the Corporation.

The Corporation can spend an action and a bit to advance an agenda or node, bringing it closer to fruition. Each node and agunda has a difficulty number to indicate how many times it must be advanced in order to take effect. A node that has been sufficiently advanced is activated and can be used repeatedly, but stays in play in its data fort. An advanced agends is taken out of the game and gives the Corporation points toward victory, although some maintain an effect on the game even after they're achieved. The Corporation was by advancing seven points' worth of secrebs to completion. (Or by fiving the Netrumer to a crep. But that comes letter.) The cirts forts are protected by intrusion countermeasures electronics—ICE. These are programs designed to keep the Runner from accessing the agencies and modes in the forts. Some of these simply prevent the Russiar from young further into the fort. Others crase his programs and destroy his equipment. Still others, called Black ICE, are programmed to left the intruder or wipe his mind completely The Rumer's some a simpler—he must break into the Corporation's data forts. Once he gets in, he can access a single card. If this card is a mode, he can pay a cost in bits and cause it to be discarded if this card is an agenda, he can "expose" it, taking it out of play with no benefit to the Corporation and leaping the victory points to himself if the card is neither, he places it back where he found it. The Russer wins by stroking seven points' worth of agendas from the Corporation. As the Runner, you can attempt a break-in on any data fort, including R&D and the Head-all KCE and cards in data forts are played face-down, so you navor know what you're up against

Her strangest experience involved a piece called With a Knot in My Stomach. Begun as a sketch done "in an emotional furor" ("I'm glad I don't feel that way anymore" is all she reveals now), she later painted it for a gallery show. Danforth says the piece, which shows a human body twisted as if it were made of rags, gets more response than any of her other work. 300-CARD MONTY and now for something completely

Montherent...

No, It's not a man with three nostrils, it's an all-new collectible card game based on "Monty Python and the Holy Grail," the 1975 movie by the wacky British comedy troupe known to them and us as Monty Python.

Put out by Illinois-based Kenzer & Co., the proposed 300-card set should find its way into stores everywhere this june. So dump all your Shivans and Moxes—all you need for this game (besides a starter and some boosters, of course) is a quick with and a bit of livity.

So How Do Ya Play?

The very you start," says co designer share feller, "Bit by laying out 14 cards (from your deck) in front of you, serd of shaped like righted. You need to move your knights through (your own) little, and one space at a time. Once you get through those cards, you get so an reason the board in front of you that we call Audion, which we refer to as the Grail (ing the Holy Grait."

As you move through Trajlard, you'll encounter such familier adversaries as

As you move through England, you'll encounter such familiar adversaries as hostile shights that go "Nhil" and others that III bits your leg off even after you've dismembered them, a little rabbit with haray big point; yeeth, the Leg-orday Black Beast of Assurriggogl and all lands of microters. You onlive them, Mean-but them or ty to outwit them, Mean-while, your opponent's doing the same thing, And all the while, you for playing thing, And all the while, you for playing or two,

you're probably gonna want to put in a couple of Cartoonist Dies cards. The animator has a fatal heart attack and it eliminates*the cartoon perill. It's just additional strateov."

One of the key points of the game is that each card his two abilities on it. "You'll have a primary spect of the card," jelke explains, "like an event or a taunt or something. I'll have a pitture for example of the Frenchman, the quote on there and some effect that would generally harm the other player. If you don't want to use it for that, there'll be a smaller box on the ade that just says something like for plus one combat."

"We think that's gonno be a pretty strong aspect of the game. It'll mean that every turn, you should be able to use a card for something. You won't just be sitting there waiting to draw out a particular.

lar type of card."

If you like waiting for specific cards, don't worry. There'll be pienty of Item and weapon cards such as the Trojan Rabbit, a Smubory and the iskey thind Grenade. Of course, these things are pretty heavy to carry around, but Jelke offers a solution. "All the knights have to have a page. In order (for a knights to your party, you have to befing out a page from your party, you have to befing out a page from your hand, because scenedoch has to carry his stuff.

"That brings another element to the game. Maybe you can't hurt the guy's knight, but if you somehow kill his page, then his knight will go away."

s laright will go away."

Decessed characters go straight to the discard pile, or, as Kenzer & Co. call it, the dead cart. You'll have at least a slim chance of nesurecting your characters, however: The game contains an "I'm Not Dead Yet" card.

Something Completely

Kenzer & Co. has added a number of unique aspects to the game to ensure that the zaniness found in the movie transfers over to the CCG. "We have a quote on almost every card," Jelke reveals, and we're gonna put in the rules that you have to read the quote in order to make the card take effect. If you wanns be a rules lawyer and your friend's not reading the quote-

well, you can say it doesn't work "The other thing that's kinda popular but some Inlawtesters didn't want. to do it, are these song cards. There's a limited number of songs in the movie, like 'Brave Sir Robin' And the idea of the card is that It'll have a verse. You play it on the other player and he needs to stand up and sing the song; otherwise, some bad effect takes place. It's nothing too extreme, but at the same time it'll be kind of sifly if we start doing tournaments and we've not people standing up singing songs." That's not all. Players should be sure they know such complex facts as their own names and their favorite colors. That's right, you'll be facing the Bridge Keeper-who has trouble differentiating between African and European swalknes-and he won't let you pass until you've answered three questions. "The first ones, of course, will be easy," Jelke says, "like 'What's your name?' or What's your quest?' And the third one will be a tinsa question on the move. the Pythons or some-that I haven't seen in any other card game." Plenty of strange cards abound. including the one lelke's currently working on Intermission. "You play it and your opponent has to go take a break.

For example: Name five characters that John tom level Cleese played in the movie, And if you answer the question

then that's fine: If you fait to answer the question then you're subject

pretty unique

type of card

You're allowed to take your turn white they're gone, so I guess you're on your honor. The main point is that he can't play cards on you then. We're gonna test that and see how it works. I can't quarantee that it'll be in the final version." But guite possibly the most intriguing (and potentially cheesy) card is one that can win it all for you in one shot. "If you have the right card," says Kenzer, "you can win the game on turn one. There's a card that lets you jump all the way to Avalon from wherever you're at and lets you make a roll for the Graft.

It's called Last Chance." Obviously, you're supposed to save the card for a last-ditch effort when your opponent's mere moments away from winning the game, but you can take a shot at winning right away if you're dealt the card in your first don't succeed in finding the Grail with it, you're sent all the way back to the bot-

Can You Picture That? The art for the cards is largely being taken straight from layerdisc, with only a small amount of original art being used for bordors, card backs, symbols and a few other things. With some 90 minutes' worth of film, there are plenty of pictures available. "The more time I spend going through this movie and transing pictures," Kenzer says, "the more funny stuff I find. There's gonna be cards that people look at and say. It don't know where that came from in the movie." "I was working on one last night, the part where they just ran away from the Frenchmen and Lancelot says something like, 'The fiends, I'll tear them apart.' And Arthur's like. 'No. no. no.' and he holds him down. "When you're watching the movie, you're always looking at Lancelot and Arthur because that's where the action is. But when trapping a shot for the game, I'm looking at the other people's faces to make sure they aren't blurry and stuff. "In that particular scene, Brave Sir Robin is hilarious. He's not his shield half up, he's hiding behind it, he's got this petrified look on his face. I was just cracking up. That stuff you just don't see when you're watching the movie because your evers are attracted to the action. So we've got virtually an infinite number of cards we can come out with."

That being the case, the company has tentatively scheduled its first expansion set for March of next year.

How The Quest Was Won

Back in 1993, Jelke, Kenzer, Steve Johansson. Mark Schultz and Adam Nienomnik decided to turn their hobby. roleplaying, into a business, and thus was bom Nerver & Co. The company's fantasy noteplaying campaign product line, The Mingdoms of Kalomar, is slowly gaining speed thanks to some positive word of mouth, and the company's hoping that Monty Python will really put them on the map.

Initially, the group wanted to put out a board game, so they all began searching for certain licenses, reveals Kenzer. "Brian [Jelke] actually made this log list of movies, and we were kicking around some ideas. Then we decided to seriously think about something we might want to license. Hell, [I'm] an attorney that does intellectual properties licensing for a libring, so why don't we use that?

"I think I went through my movie colliction and started looking at them, and I was like, 'Holy cow, Monty Python! If we can't sell that to gamers, then we know we should just quit.

"So I called Brain up and he started going through his list, and I told him to stop because I had the diffuse game. As I described it to him he agreed that it was the ultimate license. The furny thing was, if was on his list, but it was like 30 down—under 'The X-Files' and above. The land like I had to the list had the list had he was the list and the list had been the land like in the land like I had been the land like I had been the land like I had he was the land like I ha

So Kenzer & Co. called up Python Pitches and, since nobody was doing anything with the license, got the rights. It didn't take long for the group to change its mind and do a CCG instead of a board game. And Kenzer & Co.'s been happy ever since.

"We want people to be laughing out loud when they play this," sums up Jeke. "We're having a great time designing it and if people have half as much fun playing it as we've had designing it so far, then I think it's really gorna be a success."

THE CHOSEN ONES

Monty Python and the Holy Grail's Coolest Cards

Y'know, sometimes the best cards in a geme aren't the most powerful or expensive ones. Sometimes they're just the most fun. So we asked Monity Python and the Holy Graif game designer Brain Jelke for his opinion on the neatest cards in the set. Here's what he said.

Famous Historian and Slaying of the Historian: While the Historian can help you out during the game, if your opponent tosses out a Slaying of the Histonian card, your game ends in a certain number of turns. "This is a game winner and dealify historia at the same time."

Knights of the Round Table
Song (three cards, one verse on each). Stand up and sing or suffer the consequences! "I love to hear Adam [Niepomnik] butcher this song. Especially the word 'indefatigable."

Get On With Its If your opponent's maring too slow, you play it on him and it becomes your turn. "The perfect card to use on Mark [Schultz] and all other slow indecisive people."

Grail-Shaped Beacon: Castle Anthrax and is residents, Naz Zoot, distract your opponent with false, uh, leads. "Knights are drawn to it like moths to a flame. Another game winner, and one of the cards developed early on."

or the cards developed early on."

Sir Robin: "Weak as a child but he can't be littled in combat because he just runs away. Pretty cool indeed."

The Leoendary Black Boast

The Legendary Black Beast in of Aaaarrrggggl: Sach-fice someone from the Round Table just for encountering the beast in NOW GO AWAY BEFORE I TAUNT YOU A SECOND TANK!

Then face a nearly hopeless battle. "This is probably the toughest monster in the game short of the kfler rabbit—another cool card, but you'll have to wait to hear about that one."

Repression: "Allows a knight to throw chivalry out the window and get rid of those pesky peasants such as Dennis."

The Holy Hand Grenade of Antioch: "O Lord, bless this thy hand grenade that with it thou miyest blow thine enemies to tiny bits, in thy mercy." Nulf Said."

Round Table Area

Get Slop Poured on Your Rude Frenchman at Castle Asarrgg dump slop... on Arthur in the move. In the game, your humilated kinght must fight an opponent. "If used in conjuction with a tough morster, your opponent is almost guaranteed to lose his best knight."

All the taunt cards: "I love to read the quotes. The effects are pretty useful too. I was teaching these Swedish guys to play at the GAMA trade show. Imagine the sound of a Swede speaking English but doing a

French accent, We're going to be really big in Sweden."

AN DEAN FOSTER created by George Lucas

The binbly successful Subuley at the Hoof's five novel has been translated into a comic book series from Bark Horse (left).

INDUEST: How did you become involved in nevelizations?

like some respect

ALAN DEAN FOSTER: Ballantine had bought the nobts to one of the worst movies ever made, a film called "Luana," It was a really hideous, purported female Tarzan movie that combined all the worst aspects of Italian filmmaking and, because I had a masters in film and knew my way around a film script, Ballantine asked if I would be interested in making it into a book. They didn't even have a copy of a script for me to look at.

I watched the film, in Italian, and it was so bad that I threw out the whole thing, except for the bare outlines of the plot. Basically, all I did was novelize the cover which was painted by Frank Frazetta. And that's how I began to do film novelization.

Do not only nevel cations the same commitment as screenplaus or your personal work? I approach them all with the same seriousness and I think that's why my poyelizations have been so successful. People know. You don't fool the reader. The readers accept a book and if somebody has obviously slapped it together in a few weeks for a guick paycheck, people can tell

I'll put Aften up against a lot of books as a book and say this is a good book. Nevermind that it onginated as a movie. You would be surprised about the prejudice that there is about novelization. Part of it is because there is so much quickle, bad stuff chumed out. Also, people don't think about novelization in the same light. You take a book and make it into a movie, you get an Academy Award, Best Screenplay Adaptation. You take a movie and turn it into a book, you don't get anything. You don't get no respect. How did uses not invalved in writing the "Star Wars" novelization and Splinter of the Mind's Engl it was a two-book contract.

the novelization and Spinter. Working with George lucas was one of the most pleasurable expenences I've ever had working with anyone in the movie business. George said. "I want a a book that can be filmed on a low budget." The idea being that nobody knew how "Star Wars" was going to do, and George, thinking ahead and obviously having studied Walt Disney, wanted to be able to make a sequel utilizing existing props. That's why the story is set on a fog-shrouded planet, it cuts down on expensive backgrounds, I originally had a fairly large space battle in there, but it was cut. That was the only major change.

Do fans still come up to you and ask you to explain Luke and Leia's new incestoous kissing scene and Darth Vader's near death in Splinter? Nobody ever asks me about that. They either tell me they filed the book or they didn't like the book.

They were more concerned about Vader losing his arm in Soénter as apposed to him losing it in "leck." I did get questions about that, but it's something I have no response for. When you start out writing a story and it ends up becoming a mythology, it's very difficult to go back retroactively and fix things. But these are questions you should ask George. What I suspect is that he thought he was going to make a certain movie and he wasn't too concerned with what he was going to do with the 23rd several or whatnot What was it like working with Lucas? I had a ball working with him. He's just a regular cury. He just happens to be a visionary filmmaker with lots of money, and frankly I think he makes the movies he makes because those are what he wants to see and pobody else is making them.

I haven't seen him in a great many years and, unless he's changed, he's still the nicest guy I've ever worked with in the business. Which universe do you prefer: Star Wars or Star Treid's? I would prefer Abens'. [Laughs] Actually, I prefer Star Wars', But really, it's apples and oranges. One is more of a mythical young hero thing and the other is much more versatile. I can't really nick one over the other There are other things that Lorefer, like I "Forbidden Planet," That's a better idea for me of what I want a science fiction film to be about. Sure, it's a Hollywood execution, but at feast there's something a little deep there. Yes, you have the scartily clad calyou have the funny robot, but behind it all, there's something much bigger. Even if it is a rip-off of Shakespeare. Actually, before the Star Trek Loas, I hardly ever watched "Star Trek," I watched "The Twilight Zone." I still watch "The Twilight Zone," I watch it over and over again. They did more with one guy in a room, shot in black and white, than a lot of the shows today make with big budgets and a bio cast. What is it about 'The Twilight Zooe" that sets If apart from other shows like "The Outer Limits" co "Star Trek"?

and the acting as well. My favorite "Twilight Zone" episode was called "The Howling Man." It was written by Charles Beaumont, a writer who died vound amund 42 You talk to writen like Harlan Elison and Norman Spinrad, all these guys looked up to Beaumont.

It's about a man lost in Europe in the mountains in a temble storm, and be's taken into a monastery and he hears a man howling, he hears this horrible howling sound. He goes up, finds a man in the cell see the maid's hand reach for the key to the hotel room door because of the howling coming from the room. It was very, very eerie and done with practically no money.

(who) tries to tell him the monks are mad and they're going to lock him up too.

How about "Star Trek"? You obviously watched enough enlandes to familiarize pourself with the characters. Do you have a favorite Star Treis character?

That's a good question. Nobody has ever asked me that before. I was always very fond of Nichelle Nichols' character, I didn't care what she was playing. She just happened to be a Star Trek character

I liked Scotty, Jimmy Doohan's character. He struck me as being less Ohmpian and more human than any of the other characters. He was the blue collar guy, or the officer blue collar equivalent, down there in the dumps slaving away. Doing the hard work while every. one else was hopping around getting all the glamour.

Following the Star Trek Lags series, you were heavily toyolved with the first "Star Trek" movie.

I wrote the treatment for the first film, The first five minutes of "Star Trek: The Motion Picture," are mine. But after that. it was all changed. You see, as soon as "Star Trek" became a big-budget movie, I became an instant non-person. Nobody asked me my opinion, and as a fan. I would have oben it freely which probably would have puzzled them a bit more But that experience precipitated my move to Arizona. I just got fed up. They tried to keep my name off the script and I had to go to arbitration with the Writer's Guild

How do you on about adaption scripts or screenplays? Do you have to fellow acu guidelines laid out by the film or TV show's preducers? Generally, I'm left alone and I approach it as a fan, as someone sitting in a movie theater who wants to see the best movie possible. When I'm doing a novelization, I essentially get to rewrite the movie and I try to fix as many of the mistakes as I can. and add as much interesting material as I can. Those are the two main things you try to do. Sometimes they let you get away with it and sometimes, like with "Alien 3." which I wrote a completely different ending for and a whole bunch of different stuff, they say, "No.

you can't get away with that." Your approach to film naveligation has sometimes out you at odds with the movie industry's powers-that-be. What happened with your nevel sation of "Alien 3"? I can't tell you that because of the 20th Century Fox contract. But let me see what I can tell you. There's no gratu-Itous death of the little girl, which was Ripley's motivation for living and fighting. Ripley doesn't die in the end. And little things. Ike you don't have 23rd century guys looking for batteries for a flashlight-those common 20th century anachronisms that Hollywood doesn't deal with. Obviously you're a hig sci-fi film fan. No non have any favorite movies? My favorite? "Forbidden Planet." But I have too much of a soft spot for it, It was kind of a formative film for me. I think it was for a lot of people my age. I saw it at a drive-in movie when it came out.

There are two excellent science fiction movies and one pretty good one that came out in the 1950s. The two biggles were "Forbidden Planet" and "The Day the Earth Stood Still." The other is "This Island Earth." It has very good special effects: the aliens were not horrible monsters. But "Star Wars? is up there and "Close Encounters" is also up there.

Do you have a favorite science fiction book?

I have to give you a handful of stuff. Men, Martians and Machines by End Frank Russell which contains the first great story in science fiction that uses ecology, in my opinion. Any collection of Robert Sheckley short stories, Arthur C. Clarke's Childhood's End and Asimov's Foundation Trillogy.

Where do you take your inspiration from? A lot of it comes from my travels. I was amazed that when I met these literary gods of mine that they never traveled. They were very much stay-at-homes. Their idea of a big trip was to go from

L.A. to New York. There were few excepfions like Harry Harrison and his wife, but not many. So my travels do inspire.

Light finished a novel that's set in contemporary Panua, New Guinea, that is, neither science fiction or fantasy. It's called The Last Paradise. I just turned it in and my agent's going to potion it. It's a contemporary adventure story about an American guy who is having a XIII tough time of it because his wife and " children were killed in an accident and he goes there to find himself Which is pasier for upo to write: characters or situations and plotting?

The easiest thing for me is describing alien workls. I have a good time describing aliens and alien worlds. For me to do Midworld and 20 years later do a secuel, well, that jungle is as familiar to me as any on Earth. I love to travel and I travel where I can. And where I can't, I make it up.

Which characters are the most difficult? The human characters are the toughest to develop. Aliens I find very easy.

or fantasy creatures, but real human beings are difficult. Maybe because they're so familiar to people. You can fudge more with an alien, but with humans, everyone is a cotic

Do you know up with any of the current crep of science fiction TV shows now airing? I try. The "Star Trek" stuff is very well done, it's beautifully done. They've not a proper budget. The special effects they

from diseasors to glant estrictes, fester's accelated his universes with a wealth of lanfastic creatures can do today are wonderful, but I find it's very repetitious and I find it's a lot of shoot 'em-up.

I had very high hopes for "Third Rock from the Sun," It's very nicely acted. John Lithgow is, of course, wonderful, as is time Curtin, but it's ternibly written. You get these huge disappointments one after another.

I'll tell you a TV show I watch religiously, "Re-Boot," I know it's canceled, but how they did that week after week was incredible. It's won-

You've written extensively to both the science fiction and fautasu ceneus.

Which do you prefer? I prefer to write science fiction. The fantasy novels are very light. I have a book that just came out called Mod Amos, which is all western fantasy. It's a series of stories about a mountain man who is a little more than he appears to be. But those stories are all Bobt and fun. There's more most to science fiction, (iii)

this can be very beneficial The ability to prevent honor loss or restore a personality's honor are important and occasionally very valuable. The best use of the favor is to remove a unit from a battle. This can be used to win close battles by removing a single big unit from combat or saving a unit that's about to be destroyed. Finally, the favor is very useful in protecting your provinces from destruction. By removing the attacker's largest unit, they may not have enough force to destroy the province. Diplomacy: In a multiplayer game, diplomacy with the other players is as important as the cards you play. In a twoplayer game, overwhelming force is a viable stratecy, but if in a multiplayer came you anger the entire empire-the other players-your family is destined to be short-lived. The first player to race toward political victory (40 points of honor) is fikely to be attacked by one, if not all, of the other players. On the other hand, it's very difficult to destroy all the provinces in the game, so political victory is common in multiplimer games

Deck Construction Your first decision in constructing a deck is which clan to play. This is going to be the biggest decision you make, so a few comments on each clan are in order

. Crab: Lots of defense and force but little honor, chi or magic. This clan fits best with quick strike or defensive decks . Crane: Honor-and to a certain extent gold-is the focus of a Crane deck. It isn't good at combat but is formidable in a multiplayer game or for a fast honor victory. . Dragon: Dragon does everything fairly well, it is probably the best of the clans at dueling but not particularly great at amassing honor.

Thundering Hooves Thundenna Hooves has one objective: Use the speed advantage of cavalry to destroy one or two undefended provinces early. Once you've done that, be patient until you've built an overwhelming advantage, then send the thundering hooves down to crush your opponent. . Stables, Jade Works and Small Farms are basic gold-producing holdings. . The Sanctified Temples are included in case your honor slips below zero and you need to bring out some personalities

. The Master Smith and Retired General add force to your faster but lesspowerful cavalry.

. Oni no Tsuburu is wonderful early in the game, since he gets a six-force bonus when attacking an undefended province. If he's facing a single personality, the Shuriken of Sements can almost assure him a clear path.

. Reserve assassins for use against cavalry personalities that could slow you down. . Explosives and Breach of Etiquette slow down decks that try to race to 40 honor home unbowed, ready to defend against a counterattack.

which makes up for medicine magical ability and low honor.

Design your clan's deck in two parts: your dynasty deck and your fate deck. The former should be the focus of your attention.

The first thing to look at is the ratio of cards. Having the same number of personalities and holdings is a good mix for the dynasty dock. You don't want to have more than 15 to 20 percent of your dynasty dock made up of event cards. Events are wonderful, but they don't add to your fife's resources.

In a 40-card dynasty deck, a good design would be four events, 18 personalities, 16 gold-producing holdings and two holdings that produce special abilities.

You'll want to have some of the holdings specific to your clini, but that only makes up a level op your cards. Make surpt your stronghold can bring in most of your holdings. You'll want to get a gold-producing holding out on the first, and you'll need about 40 percent of your dynasty deck to be gold producers for that to be filest, 1'ye w don't get ado producer out on the first turn, consider discarding all four cards man work moviemes.

If you plan on winning via honor, you'll want a handful of honor-producing holdings in your deck as well—about 10 to 25 percent of your dynasty deck. Of course, this depends on how quickly you're trying to gain honor and how many of your honor-production holdings can give you cold.

Choose personalities based on what you're trying to do. Decide early if you want to use mage and how often. The shugerija are be only personalities that can do mage, but they are useless in battles (except for their spells, of course). You need to decide if force is more important than ch (Battles vs. daids) and whether you want to save some gold on personallities with higher honor requirements.

Make sure that some of your personalities have low or no honor requirements because an unfortunate honor loss could make it difficult to bring in enough personalities to notifect yourself.

The truth behind the mysteries of the Loch Ness Monster, the Cardiff Giant and the walking rhinoceros waste basket that haunted Cornell University

By Eric Black

One of the greatest fantasy creatures of all time is one you've probably never heard of: the Faress.

OF: THE LGYESS.

The great circus promoter P.T. Banam created this monationsly one SLperanck's Day namely 160 years ago, Sak-Parank's Day namely 160 years ago, Sak-Parank's Day namely 160 years of Skidshow exhibits, so when he added a Skidshow exhibits, so when he added a new attraction on his exhibition half that day, a buzz went through the running crowds. Eager to see what hideous mistake of nature an Egress might be—some mad cross between an eagle and a bigress?—people lined up and started filing through the outrain...only to find themselves supposited in a barren alley behind the hall. Ap pormised, they behind the hall. Ap pormised, they extend the starten and the see shown the egress—it means "exit"—and to rejoin their families inside they would have to cough up another admission fee.

For handreds of years, and for probably much longer than that, the public has proven notonously willing to believe the most preposterous claims of ghosts, see surpents, alens and other supermatural phenomena. All you really need to start a hous is a good piece of fake evidence and a well-executed PR campaign. Heck, you don't even need the fake evidence.

Don't believe me? Well, welcome to the mysterious world of.. the Egress Cue "National Geographic" theme.

The Yeti, Bigfoot and Sasquatch

Nothing seems to bring out the public guilfelity quite like briny apment nursing around na forest. People, in fact, are much public about details in movies than they are about reality. All it siless to ruin believabilliyin a movie is one shot of, say, a gaint sileper running down Chreshotard's bedievabilper running down Chreshotard's bedievabilte wheneve some restined; gets liquored up and goes storping around the woods at grey wooden foot, half the country goes on Seputath delivery.

In North America, Biglioot and Sasquatch sightings date as far back as 1840, while in Tibet and Nepal, Yeti sightings go back hundreds of years, Bellewey claim these enormous hany bipeds are "missing links"—primate creatures somewhere between apes and humans—that have survived in tirry isolated colonies since whenever they first evolved. Student Hugh Troy admitted to faining the whole thing with a wastepaper basket shaped like a rhino foot.

Reports of rhino flavor in the water dropped off sharply.

The Loch Ness Monster Like Bigloot, the Loch Ness Monster is frightening not so much because of its alleged size and sheer physical power but because it's just so '70s. CB radio, Billy Beer, sideburns, the Loch Ness Monster...they all kind of run together in a syrupy haze that leaves a bad taste in your mouth, like Tang mixed with Count Chocula.

In 1933, the British press started receiving reports that a hippered beast with a naise-five head had been spotted in Loch Ness. Reporters som to investigate made no direct sightlings, but when they found a trail of unusual points along the shore, they declared the creature was real. But when the Bettish Nusuum examined the parist, they found they had been made with an unbroils stand shaped like Arryway, whether or not there's a spirit world, there were certainly plenty of people willing to capitalize on it. American medium Daniel Home, for instance, managed to amass a fortune based entirely on ordinary sleight of hand techniques. Specfacular events were common during Home's séances. The table would mysteriously rise and spectral hands would appear, caressing Home's trance-wracked face. In fact, Home had learned how to acrobatically balance a table on his knees and lift it without showing any sign of effort, and he would smear his own hands with olive oil and phosphorus to create the "spectral hands" effect. People were ready to pay Home handsomely for his services, but he knew that if anyone ever caught him he could be amested for fraud, so he never actually asked for money. Instead, he set out a bowl and let people make whatever "fove offerings" they saw fit. Social propriety being what it was, Home collected anywhere from $500 to $1,000 worth of "love offerings" a night. Home clid come close to getting caught

Home did come dose to getting augstit once. While conducting a seance with the British poets Robert and Elizabeth Barrett Browning, Home managed to conjure up the face of a little boy who claimed to be their decessed on. The sprik encouraged the poets to keep writing.

The next day More learned that while the Brownings had in fact lost a child, it was due to a miscarriage. The baby had never been born, much less become a young boy. At Home's next séance, the ghost of the Browning child returned and explained that he had omwo into a boy during his time in the afterlife. Suridenly, someone at the table reached over and grabbed the spirit, only to discover he was now holding Home's foot painted with the face of a little boy. Home quickly snatched his foot away and went on as if nothing had bappened. Somehow, his reputation was never hurt by this, Perhaps inspired by Home's brazen techniques, Boston medium Hannah Ross began offering her distinctive services to gneving parents in the 1880s. During a séance, she could make the spirit of a parent's decreased bully actually materials in real human balls as that when the Rose would stand in a cutrained cubble in a darkened convention while the patients sat nearby. is still on display in Cooperstown, N.Y. More recently, in 1968, biologists lyan Sanderson and Bernard Hexavelmans, invesfigators of Biofoot-type claims, were called to a Minnesota farm to view a Cro-Magnon-like specimen encased in a block of ice. The specimen was part of a sideshow (you can see where this is going), and after examining it, Sanderson and Houselmans believed they had found a new "missing link," which they dubbed Homo panguides. Defending their conclusions in a scientific journal, Sanderson went so far as to write, "I defy anyone to fool Bernard Heuvelmans in a case like this. You just cannot 'make' a comse like this."

Unless of course you happen to be Howard Ball, a former designer of prehistors; models for Deneyland, Ball had been commissioned by a promoter to build a false icentain, and when he saw Sanderson's article and the accompanying plones, he recognized his creation and had a good chuttle. Sanderson has since passed ways, but Howardman smartinass the specimen they ocarmed was real and has since been switched with a false.

The Mostest vs. The Ghostest

Of course, we all know the truly compelling question about mysterious beings such the Yet, like monisters and extroplasmic spirits. The issue that deserves every available research dollar we as a people can muter is not whether thisse creatures are read of false or what highlish we stand to gain by learning from their ways but rather which creature could beat the parts off the other in a field.

Nesse may have the advantage of sheer physical size—all she has to do is roll around and she could sopeath Sasquarch, Bigfoot and their entire extended family—but does that do any good against the intangible of the Browning float child?

A Middle-earth: The Wizards game variant of warfare and diplomacy marked by many great events, the most noteworthy of which was the destruction of Saurori's migraging. However, what if the Istafiche five wizards—had never come to Middle-earth! What if Bilbo had never found the One Ring in the caves of Goblin-Gate?

By Jeff Hannes

Without the likes of Gandalf and Saruman roaming around, the third age of Middle-earth would have had a very different ending. Without any knowledge of the ring, the free people wouldn't have been so quick to unite against Sarum. They would have continued to fight amongst themselves, until one ruler stood strong.

Overview

In this four- Lo five-player variant for Middla-earth: He Wizords, you save the folio of one of the great generals and leaders of Middle earth. Faraious races of the land are at war with one another, and only the stronger will will survive. As a general, you control a great army. But one army worth of the enough to claim utilimate rate of Middle earth—you will need the help of You can take one of five roles:

Aragern, leader of the Dúnedain Rangers of the North; Thrandsil, master of the woodland Elves; Théoden, king of the Mark and sovereign of the Riders of Rohen; Inrahil, prince of the South and leader of the Knights of Dol Amrothy or Thorin, king under the mountain and ruler of the Dwares.

In this variant the 29 faction cards represent armies that can move through the regions of Middle-earth. The object is to eliminate your opponents by taking control of their home regions with your armies and then taking over their home sites.

The seating and play order is as follows: Riders of Rohan, Knights of Dol Amroth, Rangers of the North, Wood-Eves and Blue Mountain Dwarves. (If only four people are playing, leave out the Dwarves.) Your best bet is to use some sort of prop—say, a gauntlet or dagger—to designate whose tem it is.

During the game, feel free to pass notes to other players, or even to huddle in a comer of the room for secret negotiations. Allances can tip the balance of power in your favor—but beware that your compatroits may not be as honorable as you!

Each player starts with the following cards in play the army's main faction, the army's general, the army's home site and up to 12 mind's worth of characters (The "Starting Cards" sidebar gives the opening elements for each army.) No player may use another player's starting character or army in his fets'.

To determine the starting characters besides the generals, have a randomly chosen player play one acral from the pool of characters acral from the pool of characters table in order until no one wishers table in order until no one wishers table in order until no one wishers cates are not allowed, and you cates are not allowed, and you characters, including your general. You general 'or mind some never counts assist your general influence assists where contains your general influence."

Each player may start with one minor item, except the Horn of Anor. This is in addition to the items Théoden, Imrahil and Thrandull automatically get (see "Starting Cards"). Each play deck must consist of an equal number of hazards and resources, with at least 25 of each and no more than 10 characters. Only one Owarven Ring may be used in each deck. None of the cards listed in the "Banned Cards" sidebar may be used in this variant. It's easier but not necessary if you have all 09 sites available in a location deck and if each player has at least one copy of each region. Rules

The game begins much like a standard multiplayer game, with players moving companies of characters around the map to pick up items, recrut alies and factions, and hadded other business. However, there are several fundamental changes to the rules. Except for army movement, which not allowed for the list five turns, all these rules remain in effect turns, all these rules remain in effect

Edhellond, the Grey Havens, Lorien and Rivendell still count as neutral havens that can be utilized by any player. . Each player's hand size is 10. Cards like Book of Mazarbul may be used to increase hand size. . No player ever draws cards for a company's movement, Instead, at the end of the communal turn, once all players have finished their turns, each player may discard up to three cards. All players then replenish their hand

Turns

to 10 cards

Certain aspects of the turn are taken multaneously. For example, everyone takes their untap and organization phase at the same time. Play continues when everyone has played a site card for each of their moving companies. Company movement is then resolved one at a time. On the first turn, the Riders of Rohan op first: on the second, the Knights of Dol Amonth on first: and so on

Before any hazards are played, all players must reveal their site cards, Hazard limits for companies are determined as they normally would be. The player to the left of the player who is moving has the first option to play hazards. He may play as few or as many as he wishes up to the hazard limit. If when he finishes there are any hazards left on the limit, the option passes to the next player. This contimes until the limit has been reached. or all players have had the chance to play hazards.

Once the acting player has dealt with hazards for each of his companies, move on to the next player. When everyone is done with movement, go around the table again, this time having each player take his site phase. When everyone is done, each player may discard up to three cards and then draw back up to 10.

Aragorn controls the Rangers of the North. He has three free direct influence and a +2 bonus against the

In this variant, you assume the role of one of the great generals of Middle-earth. The various races of the land are at war, and only the strongest will survive.

Play continues in this manner for five turns. At the start of the south turn, the war beams! The war is signified by several new rules. Doors of Night is permanently considered to be in play, and cards like Twillight have no effect on Doors of Night's status, (Gates of Morning is banned from the game.) The most significant change, however, is army movement.

Armies

The most important element in this variant is the factions, which represent your armies. Each faction has a battle score equal to its marshalling point value plus the number you need to beat to bring it into play. Example: The Rangers of the North is worth three MP and you need to beat a nine to bring them into play. Its battle score is 12. An army can't move unless it's controlled by one of your characters Any character can control an army. but few will be as effective as your general. When in combat, the character controlling an army adds his unused direct influence, including any specific bonuses he might have to influence the army he controls, to the army's battle score. Example:

Rangers of the North, Under his control, the Ranger army's battle score rises five points to 12 Once the war begins, an armymovement phase is added to each turn. After the organization phase but before players out down site cards for their companies, each player gets to play hazards and then move (and attack() with each of his armies. The hazard limit of a company containing an army is three regardless of the number of characters in the company, and the site path includes the region the army moved from and the region to which it's moving. Hazards are played in the same fashion as they are for regular companies. The player who will be moving his character companies first this turn is the first to face bazands.

There are a few changes for dealing with army attacks. First, only the army is affected by attacks against the company. Characters traveling with an army can never be attacked unless they leave the army to enter a site (more on this below). If an attack has multiple strikes, the player controlling the defending army must divide his army into sections of at least one each and take each of the strikes separately. The divisions need not be equal. Example: The Hillmen army (10 battle score) is attacked by a band of Wolves (three strikes at eight). The player controlling the Hillmen divides the army into sections of three, three and four and then rolls against the Wolves' eight prowess three times, once for each section. (The Hillmen can also be divided into two companies of one and another of eight if their general

so desires) If a section of the army is wounded by a strike (ties count as wounds), the army takes a hit; use counters or dice to keep track. For every hit on an army, it must subtract one from its battle score. If an army's battle score ever reaches zero, it is eliminated. If an army is in its home region during your organization phase, it heals and removes one bit.

Armies can move to an adjacent province or remain where they are. Early player should take a region card and everyone should flip their cards over simultaneously to show where their armies are oping. Resolving army movement is simple. If an army attempts to move to an empty adjacent province, it gets in. If two armies attempt to move to the same province, they go to war, the winner gets in and the loser stays where it is, If an army tries to move to an occupied province, it goes to war with the opposing force. If the army trying to move into the region completely destroys the occupying army, it moves in; otherwise both factions stay where they are. When two armies fight, each player rolls 2d6 (two six-sided dire) and adds the results to his army's battle score. The higher total wins, and the loser takes an amount of hits equal to the difference between the totals. Adjacent armies that haven't moved this turn and aren't involved in a battle can support either the attacking or defending army, just add the supporting army's total battle score to the army it's helping. All hits are still taken from the main army involved in the battle. You can support another player's army-in fact, it's one of the key strategic aspects of the game. Example: Suppose the Knights of Dol Amroth (current battle value 17) attack the Riders of Rohan (18) and the attack is supported by the Wood-Elves (16). The Knights of Dol Amroth player rolls a three, the Riders of Rohan player rolls a seven. (The Wood-Elves player doesn't roll because he's only supporting the attack.) The Knights' total is 36 (17+16+3), while the Riders' total is 25 (18+7). The Riders of Rohan would take 11 hits of damage, reducing its total to seven. Once all army movement and battling has been resolved, all players should draw back up to 10 cards and then do regular company movement. At this time, players can send characters that have been traveling with an army into a site in the army's region. However, a character that separates from the army is susceptible to attacks keyed to either the region or site he is in.

Attacking During your site phase, if you have a character at the same site as another player's character, you may enter the site and, after facing the automatic attack, tap one of your characters to attack another character at the site. Fach player rolls 2d6 and adds the result to his character's prowess. The higher total wins: the loser is wounded (roll a body check). If there's a tie, continue rolling until someone wins.

Winning the Game

In order to knock another player out of the game, you must do two things. First, you must have an army occupying his home region. Next you must send one or more characters to take over his home site. If this defending player has any characters at the site, you must wound the toughest defending character (defending player's choice) with one of your characters (per the rules above). If you win the battle, the defending player is eliminated, along with all of his cards. (Once the site's champion is defeated the rest don't feel much like fighting.)

The game ends when there's only one player left or when the last two players decide to share the victory in an alliance, although they better have good reason to do so.

The ultimate face of Middle-earth is in your hands. Will Aragorn prevail as he did in the "Lord of the Rings," or will Thorin fulfill his promise from The Hobbit and restore the Dwarves to their splendor of yore? There's only one way to find out .. so grab a few Tolker fans and show Sauron who the real master of Middle-earth isl

ALLIANCES: BEST EXPANSION EVER?

Albanes, the latest expansion see for Mage, hasn't even lift the shelves and it's stready making waves. Then's to several Albanes pre-release sournaments, the Mage community is already abutz with specialation as to what the new cards will do to the game environment. The most survivision card in the set is the Bal-

The most surprising card in the set is the exidenses blories Affour means for Si Cressure, the Horde is just as much of a bargain as the justim Djøn. The price of the Justim has been steadty on the rise, but now there's a new bed boy in town, and the Baldewan Horde will be much easier to get a hold of. Watch for the price of the Justim to drop back into reality.

Wizards of the Coast also introduced "fixed" various of Timetewister (Diminshing Returns) and Ancestral Recoil and Demonic Tustor (Edirary of Lat-Niam). These new cards should prove to be very popular, but they probably won't burt the value of their more powerful counterparts.

value of their more powerful countingers.
Hilstone docks should loop druming along in popularity, thanks to cards like Helm of Obedonce and Ashnod's Cylix. With nastes like the Belduvan Horde, Yakmaya Anta and Surge of Strength (the fixed Bersank), reddgreen dieds may climb tack into the limplith.

Despite the addition of another land-kill card (Pillage), and destruction decks will take a serious hit thanks to the cheap and effective Loudstone Busble. Creatureless decks better watch out as well. If enough people start tang Helm of Obedonce, the value of cards like The Abyss may take a senous dip

No one's sure exactly what effect Albances will have on the card market and the play environment, but one thing's sure — it's definitely going to make an impart.

Netrunner on Fast Track

CCG/em Wizards of the Cost, is enjoying brisk sele-"It's a refreaking game." says Avrom Olver, co-owner of Adventures in Games and Comes in Carmedack, Calff. It's very clean-cut on how to play the game—the right meture of being not too complex but not too simple. My customers can oft an enrolled same with the purchase of the one dual starter deck. That's not always the case with other CCGs."

Adds Scott Olman of Pegasus Games in Medson, Wis., "Netrosser is filled with the pargon and nomenclature associated with the computer age. I know that quite a few garners are netturfiers, so this CCG ought to be a big seller. The fact has it's a Wizards of the Coast product will automatically generate sales."

Netrusers brines a new commonality to the world of CCGs: Add "vital" to common, uncommon and rare labels for cards. In terms of rarity, is appears wital cards full between uncommons and rares. In the price guide, vitals are valued between $1 and $4, white rares range from $2 to $12.

GUIDELINES

WHAT YOU WEED TO KNOW ABOUT THE INQUEST PRICE GUIDE

About the Price Guide

The following collectible card game price guide contains the most accurate and up-to-the minute card prices available. To make sure the values listed are as timely as possible, we're in constant contact with hundreds of retailers and fans throughout the country. The price ranges listed reflect the current selling prices for Near Mint cards. The higher price represents the full retail price for an individual card or a single item. The lower price is what one might expect to pay if purchasing from a fellow collector, or if buying more than one card. There are many other factors that can cause a retailer to once a card for less than the "high price," which includes local competition, current saturation of the market, and just plain old supply and demand. (Ultimately, though, a card is worth whatever you are willing to pay for it, or what someone is willing to pay you for it.) A value listed for a card in a price quide does not definitively state what a card is "worth." How to use the InQuest Magic Price Guide It's easy. When a card has changed value since last month's listing, or when a card in exposencing hisavy sales without a price change, it has a shaded bar, if the cord has men in value, it has a pink bar. If it has fallen in value, it has a blue bar. If the card is selling brokly but has not usen or fallen in value since the last listing, it's marked with a yellow but in this example, the Dark Heart of the Wood has usen since list month, the Diabolic Machine has dropped in value since last month, and the Electric Eel has been selling Wo wildfire without expenencing any fluctuation in price

How to use the InQuest CCG Price Guide In this example, Blood Wars is the name of the game, TSR is the name of the manufacturer, and Factols and Factions is the title of the expension set. In addition to the park and blue bars, a green bar is used to indicate a set that is being fisted for the first time in the price guide. A velow bar indicates that a set has been hereby traded with no once change. A * indicates that a price was not available at this time Remember, color bars do not indicate whether a card will use or fall in the future. We

Bettle of Soldimon is a rare artifical, it has a three power rating, and it was painted by Jesper Murfors. He cesting cest is fear maps: H's evolleble in Arabian Moder and Revised. His a coin and if the cain ends up in your force, you get a 5/5 flying artifact greature; effervise, yes take two demogs. How do we know all that? Become ear Lord Zoul told us. No, no, just hidding. We know all that coal stuff because we've read all the real reference thants below. Zool had must te nething to do with it. Just so you know restricted made one limited te can pay deck in terrmoment settings. And banned cooks well, ore o ne-no for tournaments

RARITY

InQuest is project to present a normess, no first quide to card rarity. Forget about rarity ratings like U3, C1, or 82-D2: in this price guide, cards are either common, uncommon or rare. We've not a real simple abbreviation system for those wordscheck it out below Common They're the cords you get by the fictful when you buy packs, Good stuff, but not very expensive

Uncommon These are a little difficult to come by You assoly get a couple of these per pack, and depending on how useful they are in some plos, some corry beovier point tops than others.

Bore Mhea manmai Yau only usually get ene of these per pack, and some of the price tags attached to these belief moke Danold Trump say "Wee."

UR Ultra-Rore These are those tards that usually are found one per box and semetimes even less frequently wan wan's unique take on the world of gaming

It was a late Saturday night. The wife and I were in the inCuest. She turned to the first letters page, then flooped it middle of a Monopoly game when I decided to ask her a question that'd been bothering me for a long time. "Explain something to me," I said, handing her the dice.

"You fike Managaly, You like Scrabble, You like Trivial Pursuit. As far as I can tell, you like just about every kind of game there is except card games. How come?" This also happened to be true for our female neighbors, my sister-in-law and my female cousins. All were avid gamers, but trying to get them interested in CCGs was like trying to get vampires interested in sharp stakes.

She rolled the dice, landed on Free Parking, and then bought a botel for Vermont Avenue, "That's not true. I like some of 'em. I like SimCity. I like Star Trek."

"Minut else?" She shragged.

My turn. I landed on Vermont and forked over $550. "Stay right there." I left the room, returning a few minutes later with an armicad of card games. I handed her a copy of Rose, the came of battling werevolves, "What do you think of this one?"

She thumbed through the cards-Broken Limb, Vital Blow. Disembowelment-in all their blood-splattered clory. "Gross, gross, gross, gross, really disgusting, gross." She handed them back. "No way." She landed on Go and packeted $200

"Okay, try this one," I gave her Guardians, the fantasy game with all the cute stuff like Smoowarts and Giant Penguins, Naturally, she longred the Giant Penguins and went straight for the Babes. Wild > Nymphs and every other card that featured nubile females in various states of undress. "Totally sexist," she said, shaking her head. "I can't believe this. These are demeaning?" I rolled again, landing on Tennessee Avenue, another one about them?" "I'll buy you a new car if you can find me 10 women who don't think these are offersive."

"Yeah, well, but not every game is like that, Roge, for instance. That "No, that's just repulsive. You owe me $950." While I was busy mortgaging my railroads, she went to the bookshelf and retrieved one of our leather-bound volumes of down in front of me. "How many of these letters were written by women?" she asked I studied the names, "Uh, zero,"

"Look down here. See all these people wanting pen pals? How many are women?" "Well..."

"And that game convention you dragged me to last summer. How many women?"

"Lots. As a matter of fact-" "Not counting the ones in chain-mail bitinis."

She had me there.

She took her turn. A hotel went up on Park Place. "Look,

I'm sure there are women who like this stuff. But you've got to admit, card games are mostly for males. They're mostly made by males, mostly played by males and mostly marketed to males. They always have been. And they probably always will be." She picked up the Guardians deck with her thumb and finger, holding it like a dead rat, and continued: "I want you to think about this, Imagine that every image in this deck of a half-dressed woman was replaced with an image of a halfdressed man. Imagine that instead of Babes cards, there were Hunks cards that showed dewy-rived duss in teeny little sockstraps. How interested would you be?" It was 2 a.m. This conversation was giving me a headache.

"You have," she said, counting my money, "$16 left." "Can I borrow a hundred?" She rolled her eyes. "Okay, I give up." I gave her the $16. "But since I let you win. I expect you to humor me." "Oh? How so?" "By trying the card game I Invented. Guaranteed to bring the sexes together. I'm gonna sell it to Wizards of the Coast and make us rich." She eyed me wanly, "What is it?" "Strip Magic, First, you unbuckle your-" The Monopoly board missed my beard by a good two feet. Lucky for me, she throws like a girl.
